this somewhere else?

The dashboard interface includes:

- Logo icon
- Dashboard title bar
- + New Project button
- Search bar with magnifying glass icon
- Favorites section with a dropdown arrow
- All Projects section with a dropdown arrow
- Three project cards:
 - Project 1 with a star icon
 - Project 2 with a yellow star icon
 - Project 3 with a star icon
- Each project card has a '+' sign, a settings gear icon, a person icon, and a flower icon.
- Some folder icon with a dropdown arrow
- New folder button with a folder icon and a plus sign

Possibly
custom folders,
maybe shared ones for organizations?

View documents is a window with a list

All this stuff move here

The diagram shows a wireframe of a project management application. At the top is a header bar with a logo, the title "Project 1 ★", and various icons. Below the header are three main sections: "Upload Document", "View Documents", and "Reports". The "Reports" section contains links for "Week 1 →" and "Week 2 →". At the bottom are buttons for "+ New Report / Schedule" and "Enter text...". A sidebar on the left can be opened or closed, containing a list of projects and folders. Handwritten annotations explain the design: a blue arrow points from the sidebar to the "Upload Document" section; another blue arrow points from the sidebar to the "Reports" section; a blue bracket at the top right groups the "View documents" and "Reports" sections with the text "All this stuff move here"; a blue bracket at the bottom right groups the "Reports" and "Enter text..." sections with the text "When viewed vertically, these go below each other".

↳ Sidebar can be opened/closed.
Used to access other projects quickly
(maybe a manager has multiple projects etc.) When opened it pushes main page elements to the side

When viewed vertically, these go below each other
